To the Principles for Digital Development Working Group:

On behalf of Chemonics, I am proud to provide an endorsement of the Principles for Digital Development. At Chemonics, we use our expertise to fuel continuous innovation knowing this will enable us to design even better development solutions to help people around the globe live healthier, more productive, and more independent lives. Every action we take is driven by the belief that those who have the least deserve the best we have to offer. Whether this is by designing for the users, understanding local existing structures, or ensuring quality data is available to the right people at the right time, we believe in collaborative approaches, solutions and tools that reach more people and achieve greater impact.

As an endorser of the Principles for Digital Development, we will strive to embody the concepts of the Digital Principles, represented in our global workforce and in the policies and processes guiding our international development activities.

Chemonics looks forward to collaborating with other endorsing partners to advance these principles and ensure the international development community as able to realize the full potential of ICTs.

Sincerely,

Michele Piercey
